INDIGENOUS ROUND

Indigenous Rugby League History

The first Australian Aboriginal rugby league team was assembled in 1973 The Aboriginal team managed to win seven of its nine matches in just 10 days, The team consisted of 34 players – 19 from NSW, 13 from Queensland and two from the Northern Territory. They went on to win games against Kiwi premiers Wellington Petone, the only all-Māori team & Auckland club & Te Atatu, which the Aboriginal side won 17–13.

Edward George Green (born 17 December 1883 in Grafton, New South Wales), was a pioneer Australian Rugby League player. He is reputed to have been the first Indigenous Australian to play rugby league at first-grade level in Australia, when he played for Easts in 1909 (Today's Sydney Roosters).

2024 marks 64 years since Lionel Morgan became the first Indigenous man to represent Australia, scoring two tries on debut in a 56-6 win over France in Brisbane, on the end of a backline that included future Immortal Reg Gasnier, Keith 'Golden Boots' Barnes and try-scoring machine Ken Irvine. In the company of greatness and never looking out of place, Lionel had made it all the way from Wynnum Manly to wear the green and gold, five years before Indigenous people were even allowed to vote in Queensland.

We acknowledge the the traditional custodians of the land, the Whadjuk people of the Noongar Nation. And acknowledge their elders past, present and emerging. Always was, and always will be Aboriginal land.
